RHYTHM NATION

Karaoke is a favorite pastime for young Chinese, and our favorite spot is the popular KTV where you can sing for the crowds or rent a private room.

FRIED AND TRUE

Don't miss Yang's Fried Dumplings—one of our favorite restaurants in Shanghai—for their xiaolongbao, or fried soup dumplings filled with savory broth.

FAST TRACK

Buckle up when you take the Shanghai Maglev Train. As the first high-speed magnetic levitation line, it's the world's fastest train and can reach up to 267 mph.

CHARMER'S MARKET

Every weekend in the People's Park, you'll find the Shanghai Marriage Market where hundreds of Shanghainese parents solicit potential spouses for their unwed children.

JAZZ HANDS

One of our favorite music spots is The Jazz Bar at Fairmont Peace Hotel—one of the first hotels in Shanghai. Every night at 7:30, you'll hear the oldest Chinese jazz band croon classics.

SOUL TRAIN

Legend holds that Metro Line 1 at Lianhua Lu Station is plagued by ghosts. Locals believe the line is cursed because of its close proximity to a large morgue.

TOWER POWER

If Shanghai's world-famous TV Tower looks familiar, it's because it's been featured in many American films including "Fantastic Four," "Mission Impossible 3" and "Godzilla: Final Wars."

EYE SPY

In Chinese culture, it's common practice to stare at people out of curiosity. So if you catch a few lingering glances, don't be self-conscious. Chances are there's probably nothing in your teeth.

THE BUND AND ONLY

This famous stretch of harborside showcases one of the most eclectic collections of architecture in the world—from Art Deco to Romanesque.

It turns out the old city of Shanghai, known for its beautiful waterfront, is sinking at a rate of 1.5 cm a year.
