20,000 LEAGUES ABOVE SEA

It'll take your breath away—literally. Peru is home to the second-largest mountain chain, the Andes, exceeding heights of 20,000 feet.

LOCAL FLAVOR

Quintas—alfresco cafés specializing in Andean cuisine—offer authentic food and ambiance. Try Don Fernando in Lima for a taste of the mountains.

RAIN OR SHINE

From the world's driest desert to the lush Amazon rainforest, you'll find 28 unique climates in Peru to experience.

BON A-PET-EAT

A common dish you'll find on menus across the country is cuy, or roasted guinea pig—served whole, with the head intact.

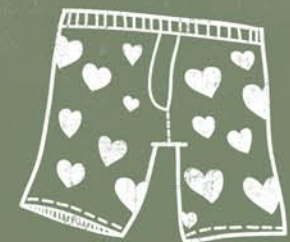

BREAKING POINT

For a surfer's paradise head to Mancora—home to the world's largest point break, or ideal surfing wave.

PERU-SE THE MARKET

Cuzco's Písaq Market offers jewelry, crafts and local foods like choclo con queso—corn on the cob with cheese and chili sauce.

LUCK OF THE DRAWER

Celebrating with locals on New Year's Eve? Give the traditional gift of yellow underpants, thought to bring good luck to those who wear them.

From the Amazon rains to the desert sands: this is Peru's story.
